This presentation will focus on factors that come to bear on the decision to recommend either analytic group therapy, individual psychoanalytic psychotherapy or psychoanalysis for a patient. I hope to consider influences of experience, knowledge and theory as well as the influence of bias or prejudice and also opinion. This is meant to be an introductory exploration at this stage for myself and I am sharing this with those present. I hope that the discussion can allow some expansion of our ideas and ultimately be of use for our group.
